ROSITA FORBES. AN ENGLISH WOMAN'S EXPLOITS.

NATIONAL TRIBUTE. A reception organized by the National Political League in honour of Mrs. Rosita Forbes was held last night at the Hotel Cecil. Occasion was taken to present to Mrs. Forbes the "National Tribute," a book containing the signatures, headed by that of the Prince of Wales, of a great number of representative men and women of the British Empire.

WAR IN ANATOLIA. A DEFENCE OF GREEK ACTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES. Sir,—Once more English and French newspapers are in full cry after Greece. Once more we are invited to believe that the truculent Christian lamb is molesting the kindly Turkish wolf. Greece, it seems, is beginning "a new war," or, as some writers prefer to phrase it, "plunging on a risky war-gamble."

night the thermometer inside the tent fell to 25deg. F., which meant at least 15deg. of frost outside. The ground all round the tents was full of the holes of little marmot rats, the most amusing beggars to watch and not at all frightened. Dr. Kellas was not so well again here, and was much chilled by the cold winds as he came across the plain.

THE TIMES.

By deeds of note the fame of women climbs To heights before unscathed. Her daring hand And valiant face unveil a secret land; And bly show its story to The Times.

THE PARTICULAR DIPLOMATIC MAKESHIFT

The particular diplomatic makeshift in favour now is that after mediation by the Powers the Greek Army should be withdrawn from Asia Minor. Further, that Turkish sovereignty should be restored over all Anatolia, but that a limited portion of the country thus surrendered by the Greeks should have some sort of autonomy, guaranteed by the Powers.

DR. KELLAS'S GRAVE.

While I was talking to him a messenger ran up to say that Dr. Kellas had died suddenly while crossing the pass. Mr. Wollaston immediately rode off to see if this was true, and found, alas! that there was no doubt. Dr. Kellas had died of sudden heart failure. It was a terribly unexpected blow to us all and a great loss to the expedition.
